

Education Committee Report

Topping last year's incredible conference in Galveston is a tall order, but "Big D" looks to be up to the task. We have an incredible program with everyone's favorite speakers and a few new faces to spice things up. Focusing on leadership in the courts and our roles as leaders, this conference should prove very enlightening. And don't worry, we were listening last year and have included plenty of nuts and bolts to send you home armed with new ways of making Texas courts the best in the country. The State Fair will give everyone a well-deserved break, and Dallas offers plenty of other distractions to keep the fun rolling after a day of great instruction.

As one of the co-chairs of the education committee, I have worked diligently with several education committee members who volunteered their time and effort in obtaining an array of activities, transportation services, and door prizes for the participants. I contacted several members of the committee who very willingly accepted the assignment of tasks to help facilitate the development of a great conference. I want to thank all of the members of the education committee who took time out of their busy schedules to provide us with the much-needed assistance for the conference. Working together as a team always helps to accomplish more!

I encourage you to sign up for a committee this year and help to bring into fruition one of the best conferences held each year.

I appreciate all the volunteer participation we received in the education committee this year. Such welcomed support helped to make my term as co-chair both a pleasurable and rewarding experience.
