I. Operating Policies & Procedures

The Texas Association for Court Administration (“TACA”) was formed in 1976. Education and professional development are the primary purposes of TACA. Each June TACA assists in providing the faculty for the Professional Development Program sponsored by The Texas Center for the Judiciary. The original curriculum and program was developed by TACA members. These three one-week courses are Trial Court Coordination, Management and Administration and lead to certification for those who attend and complete all requirements.

Each year TACA holds an Annual Education Conference and Business Meeting. This conference provides 16 hours of continuing education for court personnel. Certificates are awarded for participation in the training. During this Conference, the Justice Barrow Award of excellence is given to an outstanding contributor to court administration in Texas.

The Board of Directors is composed of five people. Two are elected in even numbered years and three are elected in odd numbered years. One of the five serving Directors is elected Chair of the organization by the membership. The Immediate Past Chair is appointed the Secretary of the association. II. Education Policies & Procedures

Each year since 1977 the Texas Association for Court Administration has met annually for the purpose of bringing court administrators and court coordinators together from all corners of the state to share ideas and discuss the present and future of court administration. The format of the annual education conference has become more formalized over the years to meet the dictates of the participants' needs and to introduce professional management seminars.

THE ANNUAL EDUCATION CONFERENCE - WHY WE HAVE IT

The annual education conference is both a stand-alone continuing education meeting as well as the only court administration conference in the state following completion of the professional development program.

Upon completion of one or more of the professional development program's core courses, continuing education is offered through the Annual Education Conference of the Texas Association for Court Administration. This conference, held in October of each year, provides at least sixteen hours of continuing education for participants. The primary goal of this conference program is to provide coordinators and administrators with the latest information on developments in their field and the application of new technologies in the trial court environment. Program speakers include nationally recognized experts as well as Texas trial court judges, administrators and other justice system personnel.

In addition to formal education, the social interactions of professionals with others of their profession are encouraged so that an exchange of ideas can take place regarding practical applications of their professional knowledge.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE

The committee chairperson should be (ideally) one who has previously served on several committees, attended several annual conferences and is dependable. This person must work well with others and be able to delegate authority. The minimum number of committee members must be consistent with the by-laws; the members must reside in different areas of the state and be assigned individual, specific tasks. The committee members should include, among them, a person having the capability to succeed the current chairperson.

The committee must have continuity and imagination and remain abreast of relevant educational topics and techniques.

Copies of all education related correspondence should be sent to the T.A.C.A. Chair; T.A.C.A. Education Co-Chairs, T.A.C.A. Education Board Liaison, and any other person involved whose duties or position is relevant to the education effort.

PROGRAM FORMATS

Workshop

The emphasis of the workshop is on "doing." If the workshop is a personal computer training workshop, then, generally, each student has an opportunity to work hands-on with a personal computer. The concept of workshops grows out of the notion that while we learn by seeing, hearing and reading, we don't retain as much as we do when we learn by doing. Almost any topic can be delivered through the workshop format but classes must be kept manageable. Workshops are effective when several different topics must be presented, each to a group of about ten or fifteen.

Problem Solving Session

A specific topic or issue is selected and the group devises a means of dealing with the issue. For example, a specific principal of case-flow management or court administration is the subject or focus, and its application in multiple types of courts or environments is discussed. The participants enter as many variables or problems as they desire into the session; or they may offer solutions. Playing the devil's advocate is sometimes appropriate to tax the resources at hand. Participants can attempt to apply what they have learned upon returning to their jurisdictions. Practical examples of topics would be: How can telephone conference calls be used to expedite matters pending before the courts? Let's implement a speedy trial act. How do we pre-assign the first setting date to all criminal cases at the time of the defendant's first appearance in the manual or automated systems?

Round-table Discussion

This format typically is ancillary to the main program. Occurs early in morning, at lunch or during evening. Tables, typically round, are designated for the purpose of discussion for a particular topic or issue and a person is assigned to lead or facilitate that discussion. A list of topics is given to participants along with material so that they can join in whatever discussion interests them. In one such format, a number of tables are set up in a large room and the topic(s) are posted above the tables. The participants may select the table displaying topics of their interest and join in the conversation.

Presentation/application discussion

A major topic divided into smaller areas of interest. The major topic is designated and the smaller areas of interest are categorized. Then, the group discusses the applications of the topic. An example may be ethics; then ethics for judges and coordinators; finally, ethics for coordinators and how they must be applied.

Panel Presentation

This is a method of presenting a topic in which at least three but usually not more than five persons, preferably from different disciplines discuss a topic giving differing or opposing views. Discussion from the audience may or may not be invited, depending on the panel members. When members of the audience are involved in the discussion, it is generally to ask a question directed to a certain panel member. An example of an appropriate panel might be one formed of an adult probation director, a law enforcement officer, a district clerk, a court administrator, and a district attorney to discuss a current legislative bill. The discussion would center on how each of them are affected and how their reaction to the bill, when complying, will affect the others. (Caution: this is a very difficult program format and requires a great deal of planning and coordinating. Additionally, such a format may call for a skilled mediator so that strongly opinionated or better informed speakers do not dominate the discussion.)

SPEAKERS FOR ANNUAL EDUCATION CONFERENCE

In finally selecting a speaker for a particular topic, consider the experience level of the speaker as well as the speaker's subject matter. To be avoided is the speaker with a political agenda. The speaker should be one having a non-jurisdiction-specific approach to court administration problems. It is necessary to determine if the speaker will focus on an individual improvement or court administrator-related theme.

TOPICS FOR ANNUAL EDUCATION CONFERENCE

Topics may be considered first, then speakers. The subject matter must prompt the participants to ponder what is presented to them. This may change their outlook, provide new avenues of thought to them, or break them away from firmly held beliefs about court management. Topics must be conceptual in nature; they must "paint with a broad brush", so to speak. Topics should not be dogmatic but open to discussion, argument, and scrutiny.

Chief among considerations in deciding on a topic is the audience. Are they new to court administration, veterans, professional managers? Is the topic court-administrator oriented or is it self-improvement in nature.

EXHIBITORS

The TACA Vendor Coordinator is appointed (or reappointed) annually by the board of directors and is included in the annual planning session for the following year's conference. Additionally, the Vendor Coordinator is involved in the hotel site selection team.

The Vendor Coordinator, as a member of the hotel site selection process determines:

1. that adequate electrical power is available at each exhibitor booth location;
2. that hotel can provide telephone access to exhibitors requiring this service;
3. that adequate and proper space is available to accommodate exhibitors either in close proximity to conference meeting facilities or in a room dedicated to exhibitors which must also be close to other conference meeting facilities;
4. if exhibitor booth set-up fees are required by the hotel and the amount of such fees per booth;
5. Whether security personnel will be required in the exhibitor location to protect equipment prior to and after regular conference hours.

Additionally, the Vendor Coordinator negotiates hourly costs and total costs for the conference.

A close working relationship is necessary between the Vendor Coordinator and the education committee as the Vendor Coordinator assists the education committee in the following areas:

1. providing exhibitor sponsors for evening conference activities
2. procuring exhibitor sponsors for hosting of conference luncheons & breaks

The Vendor Coordinator is included in all pre-conference meetings with the hotel staff. Prior to arrival of the exhibitors, the Vendor Coordinator insures that adequate tables, draperies, and electrical outlets are available for each exhibitor. During the arrival of the exhibitors, and while they are setting up their booths, the Vendor Coordinator remains with them to greet each one personally and insure that the hotel staff responds to their needs. During the conference the Vendor Coordinator's time is spent with the exhibitors.

In addition, the Vendor Coordinator is responsible for communicating the advantages of sustaining membership in TACA to exhibitors as well as advertising in the TACA Journal.

The Vendor Coordinator also should be allotted a portion of the Business Luncheon in which to remind the membership to thank the exhibitors and especially thank sponsors of events/meals.

Further, the Vendor Coordinator is responsible for inviting the exhibitors to the social function if the Board determines that exhibitors are permitted.
